LILLEY COAL TRACT TO BE OPENED ALONG RIVER

Application Made for Charter to Develop Holdings

WILL BUILD NEW TIPPLE

Arrangements to be Made for Handling Both Rail and Water Shipments

The Lilley Coal and Coke company is to be the name of a new corporation, formed to mine the coal in the famous Lilley coal tract, with a great Monongahela river and railroad frontage, as soon os a charter applied for is granted and a modern plant can be installed.

Application for the charter is to be heard at Harrisburg July 7 and the incorporators are Thomas Lilley, Thomas Elliott, I. B. Nixon and John H. Moffitt. The charter and object of the company is described as "the owning, leading, mining, transporting, selling and dealing in coal and other minerals, whose production or extraction from the earth may be incidental to said mining and the manufacturing of coal into coke and other products thereof and the sale, transportation and dealing in said coke and other products."

Duncan, Chalfant, and Warne are the attorneys. Thomas Lilley is the holder of the large proportion of what remains of the original Lilley tract, extending from the river, on which it has a frontage of one and one-fourth miles, to Pike Run, in East Pike Run township.

It is stated that the incorporators intend to install at once the most modern mine equipment with a great tipple with which to load for both river and rail traffic. That any agreement has been made for the sale of the production either through other coal companies, or by contract with large consumers of coal and coke, is denied. The new company expects to go into the open market, relying upon the high quality of its coal for good prices. Steady employment is to be given in the new mine but the operators will be in position to wait for good prices. Mr. Lilley refused many offers to sell largely because he wanted something to do and did not wish ta leave the old homestead. He is taking a lively interest in the preparations for development.

Children's Day Program Given

Sunday Schools Hold Special Observance--Collection for Missions

Children's Day was observed at some of the Protestant churches of Charleroi Sunday by special programs given by the children. Churches holding exercises denoting what is commonly known as the Children's commencement were the Christian, the Baptist, the First Presbyterian and the Washington Avenue Presbyterian. Recitations, class exercises, songs by the Sunday schools and readings formed the principal parts of the programs. Addresses were made in all the churches on the subject of "Children's Day," and the purpose defined. Collections for missions and church work generally were taken.

THREE MEN KILLED IN ACCIDENTS

Train Blots Out Lives of Trio Saturday Night

BODIES MUCH MANGLED

Three persons were killed in railroad accidents in this vicinity Saturday and Sunday.

George Kech, a Pole, aged 30 years, employed at the Cincinnati mine of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company, at Coal Bluff borrowed $2.00 from a friend to visit his wife and three children at Brownsville. He was on his way to the train when a shifting engine mangled him to death.

Kaziner Karan, aged 30 years, and Joseph Krudokouski, aged 28 years, of Phillipsburg, had been celebrating Saturday night, it is said, and when they reached Coal Center on their way home a Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston train killed them.

MUST NOT DRUG MILK

Stringent Law Prohibits its Adulteration of Liquid

COMMISSIONER PLEASED

Dairy and Food Inspector Glad Legal Standard Was Fixed

Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust is especially pleased over the final enactment of the law fixing a standard for milk and cream in Pennsylvania, declaring that this act will put a stop to abuses that have long been beyond the reach of the pure food authorities.

"This law," said Commissioner Foust at Harrisburg, Sunday, "marks a great step forward in the interest of the householder and the honest dairyman. It puts the pump out of commission as a substitute for the good, brindle cow, and gives the tiny child a chance to get fair food. It drives the drug-shop out of the milk depot and halts the deceptive thickener as it enters the door.

"The law fixes the standard for milk fat at 3.25 per cent and that for total milk solids at 12 per cent, all being the percentages below which milk sold for household use, and to be served in hotels, restaurants and boarding houses, may not go. This is the first law enacted in Pennsylvania in which a milk standard for the entire State has been fixed. It is worthy of note also that the standard thus set is identical with the national milk standard governing the milk trade between the States. This standard was proclaimed by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States under authority of Congress, upon the recommendation of an expert commission who had studied the milk laws of the various cities and commonwealths of the Union, as well as the composition of milk of known purity from thousands of dairy cows of all breeds and from all parts of the country.

"The law interferes, however, with no fair trade in any wholesale milk or milk product. Skim milk, when clean and wholesome, may still be sold, if sold as such, for household use, and milk yielded by cows of low fat strains may easily be brought to standard by the use in the herd of cows producing fat, rich milk, or may be sold to the creamery as heretofore on the basis of its actual analysis."

The Commissioner further states that this law also improves the standard for cream, bringing up the requirement to 18 per cent, as in the national standard and prohibits the sale as "cream" of a mixture of cream with evaporated or condensed milk, or with any other substance having the effect of increacing the thickness or consistency. The analysis of the creams recently on sale in the State show clearly the fairness of this standard.

The Presbyterian Boys' Brigade took their first "hike" of the season Saturday night. The brigade marched to Shanon's Grove some distance out of town and camped out for the night coming in Sunday morning early. Plans are being made to take a camping trip to Library on the Pittsburg and Charleroi car line sometime in the near future.

SUNDAY A SIZZLER; RAIN AS A RELIEF

Record Breaking Day for Warm Weather Causes Considerable Suffering but No Fatalities Locally

With the thermometers registering torridity at the height of about 95 degrees Sunday afternoon, Charleroi people suffered much. Relief came in the rain which fell at about 6 o'clock. Later in the evening the community was visited by a violent thunder storm which continued at intervals during the night. On the Pittsburg Railways lines the traffic was interferred with to some extent, and the lighting system of the West Penn Electric company was bothered somewhat. No serious damage resulted from the storm.

THREE HURT IN A WRECK

Car Collides With Buggy at Summit Park Crossing

When a large South bound Charleroi car struck a buggy at Summit Park Crossing, near Library Sunday evening at 8:15 o'clock, the three occupants were thrown out and more or less bruised and hurt. In the buggy were a man, his wife and daughter. They were foreigners. The buggy was demolished. The three injured persons were taken to Castle Shanon to the home of a physician and their wounds dressed. The girl was the most injured, having sustained various wounds and cuts. It was stater by the people that the approach of the car was unnoticed on account of the storm gathering at the time.

SOCIAL ECONOMY MISUNDERSTOOD?

Correspondent Takes up Argument Presented Regarding Socialism

To the Editor of the Charleroi Mail:

Sir: After reading Mr. Bruce's article and your editorial in Friday's Mail, I have decided to trouble you with a few more lines on the subject. I do it because I believe you have written your editorial in good faith but without giving sufficient thought to what would happen if people would generally decide to follow your advice.

I will not take up the question of individual possibilities because it's so clear that while there is room at the top for people of special abilities, all the miners cannot become coal operators any more than all mill hands can become superintendents.

The matter of owning stock in mines or mills is also of doubtful advantage to the workers, but I will not take up that question. What troubles me is your advice of economy. Surely you are not anxious for a general panic. The next few months the closing of mills and mines in Charleroi is going to force people to economize. And the result will not be to the liking nor advantage of the business people of Charleroi.

Economy is all right for the few if only practiced by the few. But if adopted as a general rule it would have disastrous results. Let us give a few examples.

Suppose ten millions of people would at once decide to practice economy by cutting off one pound of sugar each week. This would mean over forty million pounds of sugar in one month. It would also mean idleness for an army of people employed in producing, transporting and handling this large quantity of sugar. Suppose one thousand readers of the Mail and one thousand readers of our French paper would decide to practice economy to the extent of having their names taken off the subscription list. This would mean idleness for several of the employes of both papers. Suppose the people would decide to do away with the luxury of patronizing moving picture

MISAPPLIED ENERGY.

Elsewhere in a comunication Louis Goaziou takes issue with the Mail over an editorial comment on social and industrial conditions. The Mail made the statement that in this country of opportunity poverty and impecuniousness is largely a matter of volition, and that thrift, economy and self-denial from the time a young man enters the field of labor, would enable him to become a capitalist, as capital, which is essential in every business undertaking, represents unspent savings of labor, and by this means attain a competence and independence. Mr. Goaziou holds that such thrift and economy, applied generally would cut down labor, increase competition, and cause increased misery and want to prevail, and is therefor false economy. He evidently views the situation from the mistaken standpoint so common nowadays that labor is an end instead of a means; that all a workman wants is a steady job at good wages—a chance to work—instead of the higher objects of what work will attain.

Saving as a mere end in itself is penuriousness, a most degrading and demoralizing passion. But the efforts of man to produce goods are so inefficient unless he is aided by capital, which is impossible without previous savings, that he who does not save consumes the seedcorn that is the hope of next year's harvest. It is difficult to determine at what point consumption should stop and saving begin. Undoubtedly both individuals and nations have erred on either side at various times, now living in squalor to accumulate wealth, now spending their substance in riotous living until there is a famine in the land. There is not much to choose between these two vices, but this much is clear: only so much should be saved as will maintain a maximum final consumption over long periods of time. A failure to do this is what causes the fluctuation in national prosperity which results in industrial depressions with consequent idleness of workmen and human distress.

Luxury, although harmless in itself, and perfectly laudable under certain conditions is, nevertheless, excessive consumption, and is unjustifiable to many individuals and people as a whole who practice it, but cannot afford it, because it is a satisfaction of wants permitted ahead of its time; that is, working people who make good wages expend them on ephemeral pleasures and luxuries, under the mistaken idea that the more such things they consume the more labor they create. Whereas if they saved this money and secured for themselves homes and made provision to educate their children and accumulate a competence for old age to prevent themselves from becoming a charge upon the productiveness of their children, they would be performing an infinitely greater service to the welfare of society. Excessive consumption may boom conditions for awhile, but the reaction inevitably comes when productiveness decreases and is checked because of the lack of capital—savings—to continue it.

Along with excessive consumption there is also an enormous harmful consumption that is sapping the vitality of the nation. Among these may be mentioned the consumption of alcoholic liquors. It cannot be claimed that a cessation of this consumption would cause idleness of labor, because the grain consumed in the manufacture of alcoholic beverages would not make breakfast food a month for the army of unemployed that always exists in this country. In addition immense sums are annually squandered by the working people as well as the wealthy on passing caprices which do not correspond to any really felt want. It is this excessive consumption that is causing the industrial and commercial depression through which the country is now passing.

It may help workmen temporarily in some lines of industry to produce goods for capricious and needless consumption but the only way to help society at large is to give workmen useful employment, to aid and encourage them to produce needful goods. Every employment of labor which encourages the production of luxuries is a misdirection of social energy, an encouragement to society to spend its money for "that which is not bread, and its labor for that which satisfieth not." Excessive consumption is necessarily wasteful consumption, and as such is necessarily reprehensible. There can be no kind of doubt as to the working of this principle along established and accepted lines of social economy, as well as the teachings of Christianity on this subject.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

"I look for the Lutherans to win the Church League pennant," said a local baseball fan who is deeply interested in the games of the league, "unless some of the other teams take a brace and adopt the tactics of the Lutherans and follow the plan to the end. This is team discipline, which the Lutherans are maintaining as no other team is doing in the league. Coach Joe Mason has his players under a fine state of discipline, and they obey him implicity from the start to the finish of the game. They all have confidence in him, and each player knows that Joe knows the game, and whatever he tells a player to do, that player bends every energy to execute the order. In this manner the Lutherans play by system and direction, and this enables them to win from infinitely stronger teams.

"There are several teams in the league that are much stronger individually than the Lutherans, and this strength is their weakness. These teams of strong players are disinclined to obey orders, and as an experienced player usually imagines that he knows the game as well as any one else, he usually plays according to his own judgment. With a variety of conflicting opinions on the team during a game there is no head or system, and the stronger team often goes down to defeat to the weaker one that has a general and obeys orders without question."

"I am pleased to note," observed another fan, "that there is a disposition on the college teams to do away with the senseless chatter in the game that is called 'ginger'. For some unknown reason a player is supposed to be full of ginger that can vocifciferate the greatest number of times 'Good eye, old man, good eye,' or 'make him hit,' or some other ridiculous and vapid expression which is really a reflection on a player's intelligence, when one comes to consider the parrot-like vocabulary, that is never varied. What would a workman think of a superintendent in the Pittsburg Steel works, for example, who would walk up and down through the works shouting, 'Bully boy, Tom,' 'good eye, Mike,' or some other senseless thing? Would that inspire or stimulate better effort? The Boston American League team, I notice, is cutting out the senseless chatter which sounds like a bunch of women at a quilting bee, and confining their talking to the coaches.

"Another thing the college teams are doing that is improving the game is cutting out the dirty playing, such as the catcher and pitcher interfering with the player, and basemen trying to block runners unfairly, and a hundred other tricks that are worked in every game. With the colleges setting the standard of honor, a new interest will be manifested in the game."

shows. At once an army of people are thrown out of employment. And whe na worker is thrown out of work he must at once practice economy and help to deprive some other worker out of employment.

The word economy sounds nice to many and is preached by many. But it's a false doctrine if generally applied. When the corporations begin to practice it the industrial horizon begins to look very dark. If you could persuade the thousands of workers who, out of their scanty wages arrange to put a few dollars monthly in some old bag to spend that money for clothes, shoes, furniture, etc., you would at once open up a few industries to give employment to workers to produce the extra clothes, shoes etc. called for. If we would or could buy more clothes, more furniture, more books, etc., there would be none of the so called overproduction that causes panics.

Do not preach a reduction of the standard of living through false economy. A dollar spent is a dollar giving employment to some one. A dollar put in a trunk has no value to the community.. The man who denies himself and saves his earnings has some advantages over others for the simple reason that others did not or could not, and he was able to use his savings to exploit those who had none. To what advantage could he have used the savings if everybody had done like himself?

If everybody would deny themselves and save their earnings we would soon be reduced to the level of the rat eating Chinese, and I know that the editor of the Mail would be the last man to desire such results. Let us raise our moral, intellectual and physical standards instead of trying to lower either through enforced or voluntary denials of the necessaries of life.

PAINTED HIS PORTRAIT.

His Wife Was the Artist, and the Result Wasn't Flattering.

A suburbanite but lately married went out to post a letter, and as the lamps had not been lit in the road in which he dwelt he could only dimly see his way. A short distance up the road he met, as he thought, his wife, who had been out to tea, and as he went past he just whispered:

"All right, my dear; I shall be with you in a minute."

Immediately after he had said these words he saw the lady turn a startled look upon him and then hurry away, and the horrible idea occurred to him that it was not his wife at all and that in the darkness he had made a mistake. He decided to say nothing about the matter and quickly disappeared.

When he returned home he found his wife waiting for him, and she at once greeted him with the words:

"Oh, George, I have had such a frightful experience! I was just coming down the road when a man tried to stop me and said, 'All right, dear; I shall be with you in a minute.' I ran home, found you out, and I've been so much alarmed."

George was just about to explain when an idea came to him.

"What sort of man was it?" he asked.

"Oh," replied the young wife, "I saw him quite plainly, and a more villainous face I never beheld in my life. He was a perfect monster, with crime stamped upon every feature."

George decided it was best to say nothing after all.—London Tit-Bits.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

A Terrifying Hat.

When the French artist Benjamin Constant was traveling in Morocco he was invited by the sultan to present himself at court at Fez. The painter's first thought was in regard to his costume. "Court" in Europe was one thing; in Morocco it was likely to prove something different. There was nothing to do, however, but to wear his ordinary evening clothes. He was ignorant of the fact that the Moors look upon black garments as very vulgar, and it was only after his arrival that he learned his mistake. The courtiers smiled openly; worst of all, they sneered. The painter was a man of hasty temper, and suddenly, nettled by their insolence, he closed his opera hat and sprang it open in the faces of the jeering crowd. They scattered, yelling with surprise and fear. The sultan heard the noise and demanded the cause. After he had seen and examined the wonderful hat he gave this oracular opinion:

"If I had lived a hundred years in your country and adopted all your other customs I could never have brought myself to set on my head so hideous a contrivance as that!"

Painfully Explicit.

The proprietor of a certain hotel in Europe has posted up the following warning to his clients:

"Gentlemen who come in this hotel not say anything about their meals they will be charged for, and if they should say beforehand that they are going out to breakfast or dinner, and if they say that they not have anything to eat they will be charged, or unless they bring it to the notice of the manager, and should they want not to say anything, they must order the manager for, and not any one else, and unless they not bring it to the notice of the manager, they will be charged for the least things not, according to hotel rate. And no fuss will be allowed afterward about it, and nothing will be allowed to deduct anything out of it."

After this explicit information there surely could be no excuse for misunderstanding.—Boston Globe.

Surprising the Bullock.

In times of crisis and worry a kind word has been known to have surprisingly good results. The unexpectedness of such a word is perhaps the secret of its force. A late book, "On the Wool Track," backs the moral with an anecdote.

A team was working on the Broken Hill road, and a bullock—the Beelzebub of the team—had gone obstinate, and the coach was passing. The whip was swinging, and some apt remarks were just forming on the back of the teamster's tongue when he caught sight of a clerical hat on the front seat and just in time thought better of it. He coughed politely.

"Ahem—Strawberry," he said, "proceed!"

To his obvious astonishment Strawberry proceeded.

The Indian's Vision.

More or less wonderful accounts have from time to time been given of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During a British anthropological expedition to the Torres strait the visual faculty of the natives was carefully tested, and from these tests the conclusion was reached that the excellence of vision shown by the savages has a psychological origin—that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the civilized man acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can. Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.—Scientific American.

Wondrous Tact.

As an example of graciousness and tact Matthew White tells in Munsey's Magazine of a London clergyman who was called on to address an audience of actors. Alluding to the better social status of the players, the clergyman said that in former days it was sometimes customary to brand them as vagabonds and bore a hole in their ears with an awl, that the citizens might thus be forewarned. "And who knows," the clergyman added, "but that it is a survival of an endeavor to hide this mark of indignity that causes some of the actors even today to wear their hair long?"

Bottles and Rags.

"Bottles and rags, bottles and rags!" called out a rag and bone man as he plied his calling.

"Why do you always put these words together?" asked a passerby.

"Because, madam," replied the man, courteously touching his hat, "wherever you find bottles you find rags!"—London Family Herald.

A Shellfish Thought.

"Funny, isn't it"—

"That what?"

"That when a fellow's affairs have reached the blue point he never declares that the world is his oyster!"—Judge.

The Ruthless Razor.

Lady Customer (in furniture shop)—What has become of those lovely sideboards you had when I was last here? Salesman (smirking)—I shaved 'em off, madam.

Sympathy.

Cora—Have you seen my new photographs, dear? Every one says they look exactly like me. Dora—What a shame! Can't you get another sitting?

Chiefly the mold of a man's fortune is in his own hands.—Bacon.

BASEBALL SIGNS.

Their Importance Is Much Greater Than Their Number.

Among the players we do not use the word "signal." With us it is a "sign." There are not as many "signs" used on a ball club as the public would believe. Of course the catcher must "sign" the pitcher for every ball that he throws. That is to prevent confusion or, as we say, to keep from "crossing each other." The catcher has a sign for a curve ball, a fast ball and a slow one.

To ball players all curve balls, such as the drop and the outcurve, are called "a curve." The catcher gives the same sign for any one of them. We do not call a ball that jumps "in" a curve. Ball players do not recognize the incurve. That is called a fast ball. Any ball thrown by a right handed pitcher with sufficient speed will jump inward to a slight degree. The outcurve and drop are unnatural curves, and the ball must be spun in an unnatural manner to get that peculiar "break."

The only other "sign" of importance is the one the batter gives to the runner when he intends to hit the ball. If he wants the runner to start as he swings (the hit and run play) he gives him a certain sign. There are any number of signs used for this play. Sometimes the batter gives it by rubbing his hand over the small end of the bat. Again, he may give it by knocking the dust from his shoes with the big end of the bat.—John J. McGraw in Metropolitan Magazine.

EAST INDIAN RUNNERS.

Kahars Who Can Regularly Make a Hundred Miles a Day.

Ordinary Marathon races seem rather insignificant compared with the regular performances of a certain east Indian caste. These Kahars, also known as Jhinwarb, live in the Punjab, where for centuries they have acted as runners, fishermen and water fowl catchers.

The men are trained runners and are said to be able to go a hundred miles a day without resting. According to Baily's Magazine, there is a well authenticated instance that Tika Ram, the son of Lalu Ram, carried dispatches 300 miles in three days—from Mean-Mir to Meerut.

The point discussed, however, is whether the normal exertions of the Kahar post runners and the similar exertions of jinrikisha men shortened their lives, and it appears that the Kahars, trained from childhood to be distance runners, live to be old men. They are not only able to withstand the strain of running great distances under a heavy load, but thrive under it.

The jinrikisha man, too, notwithstanding his irregular diet, excessive use of liquor and exposure to the elements, lives to a reasonable age. In Tokyo when a census was taken of the jinrikisha men a few years ago there were found to be more than 1,300 who were over fifty-five years of age.

Sailing Is So Interesting.

The lady was reading a nautical novel. She struggled along bravely for a few minutes, but finally had to appeal to her husband.

"Gerald," she said, "the author says that the boat was sailing 'wing and wing.' What does that mean? I've been on a yacht, but I never heard that before."

"That means," answered Gerald, rejoicing in the fact that he, too, had spent several hours on a sailing vessel—"that means that the schooner had her mains'l out to port and her fores'l out to starboard, or vice versa."

"Oh, I see!" cried the lady. It's just like a chicken—a wing on each side. And now I understand why they call those little sails in the middle 'jibs.' It's short for 'giblets,' of course. Isn't sailing interesting?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ancient Architecture.

Herr Knauth, the architect in charge of the Cathedral of Strassburg, has shown that the principles of construction followed by the great cathedral builders of former times are identical with those used by the builders of the Egyptian pyramids and are based on triangulation. The same simple geometrical figure underlies all these constructions. More than this, Herr Knauth traces the architectural principle in the formation of crystals and lays down this formula: "The laws of proportion in mediaeval architecture are the geometrical laws of crystallisation."

Cause of the Delay.

"Why is your friend staying so long in New York?"

"I don't know—haven't heard which of the two reasons is keeping him."

"Which of the two?"

"Yes, whether he is having too good a time to come away or has spent all his money and can't get away."—Buffalo Express.

Chronic.

"One thing about Jinx, he never comes into one's office without knocking."

"Another thing about Jinx is that he never goes anywhere without knocking."—Houston Post.

Self.

A perfect understanding of self is a perfect understanding of all things, for man is the condensed whole. From such a man no power is withheld. All things are obedient to him.—Freedom.

Life, upon the whole, is far more pleasurable than painful; otherwise we would not feel pain so impatiently when it comes.—Leigh Hunt.

First Flying Ambulances.

A valued servant and friend of the great Napoleon, Dominique Larrey, first established that system of "flying ambulances," which carried the wounded to the rear almost as soon as disabled. The staff numbered about 340 men with four heavy and twelve light two and four wheeled ambulances to each division. Napoleon reviewed this arm of the service with the greatest interest and once exclaimed to Larrey: "Your work is one of the most important conceptions of our age. It will suffice for your reputation." For the Egyptian campaign Larrey secured the services of 800 qualified surgeons in addition to the regular force. At Alexandria General Figuieres was severely wounded, and on his recovery wished to present Napoleon with a splendid Damascus saber. "Yes," said the emperor, "I accept in order to give it the surgeon in chief, by whose exertions your life has been spared." This saber, engraved with the words "Aboukir" and "Larrey," was taken from the great surgeon by the Prussians at Waterloo.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

The Horrors of Thirst.

In the oasis of Mogara, says L. Dow Covington in the Wide World Magazine, we had a first experience of the desert traveler's great enemy—thirst. We were seated in front of a Bedouin chief's tent, our two baby camels enjoying their first drink of water since they had left Cairo, when, from across a sand dune, a Bedouin came staggering and tottering toward us. His eyes were bloodshot, his lips twice their natural size, while his tongue, blue and dry, hung out of his mouth. Evidently he had lost himself, had wandered around for days in search of water and had stumbled upon the oasis in the very nick of time. To allow him to drink would have been his death. In spite of his frantic struggles, he was held by four men, while a fifth allowed a few drops of water to trickle down his throat. It was as though he were a redhot boiler which would have to be allowed to cool off before being filled if an accident was to be avoided.

Objected to Publicity.

Old Brother Brown had been approached several times by the colored deacons of his church and asked to pay his church dues. He had promised to "pay up" just as soon as he sold a calf which he owned. Several months later he sold the calf. The next Sunday morning at service the congregation sang the old familiar hymn:

The half has never been told
Of life so full and free.

Brother Brown, somewhat deaf and conscious of his failure to pay his dues, understood the words to be:

The calf has never been sold,
But when it's sold he'll pay.

When the hymn was finished the old colored man, very indignant, arose and said:

"Bredren and sistahs, I has sold dat ca'f and heh's yo' ten dollahs! But I didn't ca' about de whole chu'ch singin' about it."—National Monthly.

A Costly Tuft of Feathers.

On the apex of the crown worn by the Prince of Wales on special occasions is a curious feather, or, rather, tuft of feathers, the top of which is adorned with a gold thread. The value of this feather is estimated at $50,000, and it has the distinction of being the only one of its kind in human possession. Twenty years passed after the first hunter set out to procure the feather before it was attained, and during that period more than a dozen hunters had lost their lives in the quest. The costly tuft is of periwak feathers, and the extraordinary danger incurred in procuring it was due to the fact that the periwak, for some unknown reason, is to be found only in dense jungles in which tigers make their lair.—Chicago Tribune.

Turning the Turtle.

Turtle hunting is not without excitement. The method of capture consists of the simple act of turning the turtle on its back. Once in this position it is quite helpless. Its only defense is to cover its captor with sand thrown up by the powerful front legs or flippers. These are brought into action in an instant, and woe betide the captor who has his eyes and mouth open at the moment, for the sand is hurled with great force. When turned over the captive is dragged up the beach to above high water mark, and this is no easy task, for it weighs about four hundredweight.

Premeditated.

"And why do you claim that it was with malice aforethought that the automobile defendant ran down the complainant?"

"On the morning it happened, your honor, I heard him say that he was going to take out his new auto and see if he could not run across a few people he knew."—Houston Post.

A Giddy Girl.

"Is your daughter of a practical turn of mind?"

"No; she is very frivolous. Wants to take cooking lessons instead of perfecting her game of bridge."—Exchange.

His Honest Face.

"Anyway, he has an honest face."

"Honest? You surprise me."

"Yes; it's the only honest thing about him. It shows how dishonest he really is."—Life.

The Mandarin's Robe.

The author of "Recollections of a Society Clairvoyant" tells of the case of a lady who was haunted by reason of a garment she wore. It was a mandarin's robe from China, stated to be part of the loot from the sack of Peking. The owner, who lived in a flat in a London suburb, first began to be alarmed by "a smell of evil position in her bedroom" and heard "stealthy footsteps padding along the tiny passage in and out of the sitting room." She changed her house, but the obsession continued. The dreadful smell recurred, her cats died in great agony from some unknown cause, and uncanny footsteps were heard at night. According to the clairvoyant's diagnosis, the robe had belonged to "a man who had worn it when he engaged in the mystic forms of ceremonial magic known to the Chinese. He had met with a violent death, and certain malignant forces were still imprisoned in his robe, which, from the bloodstains on it, he must have been wearing when he was killed." The curse was eventually dispelled by the robe being burned.

Ruskin and the Champion Bore.

One of the principal clubs in Pall Mall has the misfortune to be frequented by a gentleman who is by common consent the greatest bore and buttonholer in London. Some years ago this good man, on his return from his autumn holiday, was telling all his acquaintances at the club that he had been occupying a house at the lakes not far from Mr. Ruskin, who, he added, was in a very melancholy state.

"I am truly sorry for that," said one of his hearers. "What is the matter with him?"

"Well," replied the buttonholer, "I was walking one day in the lane which separated Ruskin's house from mine, and I saw him coming down the lane toward me. The moment he caught sight of me he darted into a wood which was close by and hid behind a tree till I had passed. Oh, very sad indeed!"—From "Collections and Recollections."

Fault of the Fork.

"Won't you have a fork?"
"No, thanks. I never use forks. They leak so bad they ain't no use."

Another Murder.

Tony Parenti, an Italian, died Sunday night at the Memorial Hospital, Monongahela, from injuries received in a hand to hand encounter with a negro Sunday afternoon at Parenti's home up Pigeon Creek valley.

BASEBALL BINGLES

Vandergrift Independents Win Through Dropped Fly

MAC PITCHES GOOD BALL

A dropped fly ball in the ninth inning lost the game to Charleroi Independents, playing at Vandergrift Saturday. Charleroi was in the lead three times and apparently had the game sewed up when the tragedy of the ninth happened.

Vandergrift's infield by fast fielding saved the game several times. John (Scissors) McIlvaine pitched winning ball all the time, especially with men on bases. Guder, Charleroi's catcher stole home in the third. Cratty's hit over the left field fence was the longest hit ever made on the grounds. A party of automobilists from Charleroi drove over for the game. Charleroi's team plays Irwin Saturday, June 17, at Charleroi. Score:

Funny contests for the Boys every night commencing with tonight's show for .cash prizes.

The Quaker show is entering on its last week in Charleroi, and as the past three weeks have seen great crowds gathered on the lot each night, the Quaker says he expects the interest to continue, as he has some of his best featurs for this the final week and they will be put on nightly. One of the interesting features of the shows has been the illustrated songs in which they use the calcium or lime light, ond on Wednesday night they are going to use this light in showing the views of the life of Christ and actual pictures of the Passion Play, posed for and by those who depicted this famous play at Oberammergau. The Quaker says they are the only original set that has been shown here and the coloring and finish is absolutely perfect.

Beginning tonight there will be contests by the boys each night for cash prizes and on next Saturday night the little girls will have their innings when they drive nails for a cash prize of $2.00 Added interest in the performances will also be shown by some new faces among the people that give the vaudeville part of the entertainment this week.

There was considerable excitement at the Saturday night show and the cheering of the various Charleroi amateurs that took part could be heard all over the down town district. But the climax was reached when the Quaker removed a large tape worm that had been brought to the Quaker Doctor at his office late in the afternoon, from a jar and showed its enormous length by stretching it up in the air and across the stage.

Almost any time during the day people can be seen going to the Quaker Doctor's office carrying cups, cans, etc., that contain these parasites which his herbs have removed. He says many of the people carry around these monsters and take dopes and doses of all kinds trying to cure imaginary ills when one of the life-sapping parasites is the cause of all the trouble.

With regard to the crowds that now come all day to see him for examination and advice, he says that many are beyond the reach of medical interference and can only be given advice with regard to diet, etc., to prolong their few remaining years and alleviate their suffering; many however on the other hand, that call with little or no hope are sent away with the assurance that they can be cured and are told just what to do to reach and get back the greatest boon given to man—good health.

LILLEY COAL TRACT TO BE OPENED ALONG RIVER

Application Made for Charter to Develop Holdings

WILL BUILD NEW TIPPLE

Arrangements to be Made for Handling Both Rail and Water Shipments

The Lilley Coal and Coke company is to be the name of a new corporation, formed to mine the coal in the famous Lilley coal tract, with a great Monongahela river and railroad frontage, as soon as a charter applied for is granted and a modern plant can be installed.

Application for the charter is to be heard at Harrisburg July 7 and the incorporators are Thomas Lilley, Thomas Elliott, I. B. Nixon and John H. Moffitt. The charter and object of the company is described as "the owning, leading, mining, transporting, selling and dealing in coal and other minerals, whose production or extraction from the earth may be incidental to said mining and the manufacturing of coal into coke and other products thereof and the sale, transportation and dealing in said coke and other products."

Duncan, Chalfant, and Warne are the attorneys. Thomas Lilley is the holder of the large proportion of what remains of the original Lilley tract, extending from the river, on which it has a frontage of one and one-fourth miles, to Pike Run, in East Pike Run township.

It is stated that the incorporators intend to install at once the most modern mine equipment with a great tipple with which to load for both river and rail traffic. That any agreement has been made for the sale of the production either through other coal companies, or by contract with large consumers of coal and coke, is denied. The new company expects to go into the open market, relying upon the high quality of its coal for good prices. Steady employment is to be given in the new mine but the operators will be in position to wait for good prices. Mr. Lilley refused many offers to sell largely because he wanted something to do and did not wish to leave the old homestead. He is taking a lively interest in the preparations for development.

Children's Day Program Given

Sunday Schools Hold Special Observance--Collection for Missions

Children's Day was observed at some of the Protestant churches of Charleroi Sunday by special programs given by the children. Churches holding exercises denoting what is commonly known as the Children's commencement were the Christian, the Baptist, the First Presbyterian and the Washington Avenue Presbyterian. Recitations, class exercises, songs by the Sunday schools and readings formed the principal parts of the programs. Addresses were made in all the churches on the subject of "Children's Day," and the purpose defined. Collections for missions and church work generally were taken.

THREE MEN KILLED IN ACCIDENTS

Train Blots Out Lives of Trio Saturday Night

BODIES MUCH MANGLED

Three persons were killed in railroad accidents in this vicinity Saturday and Sunday.

George Kech, a Pole, aged 30 years, employed at the Cincinnati mine of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company, at Coal Bluff borrowed $2 00 from a friend to visit his wife and three children at Brownsville. He was on his way to the train when a shifting engine mangled him to death.

Kaziner Karan, aged 30 years, and Joseph Krudokouski, aged 28 years, of Phillipsburg, had been celebrating Saturday night, it is said, and when they reached Coal Center on their way home a Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston train killed them.

MUST NOT DRUG MILK

Stringent Law Prohibits Adulteration of Liquid

COMMISSIONER PLEASED

Dairy and Food Inspector Glad Legal Standard Was Fixed

Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust is especially pleased over the final enactment of the law fixing a standard for milk and cream in Pennsylvania, declaring that this act will put a stop to abuses that have long been beyond the reach of the pure food authorities

"This law," said Commissioner Foust at Harrisburg, Sunday, "marks a great step forward in the interest of the householder and the honest dairyman. It puts the pump out of commission as a substitute for the good, brindle cow, and gives the town child a chance to get fair food. It drives the drug-shop out of the milk depot and halts the deceptive thickener as it enters the door.

"The law fixes the standard for milk fat at 3.25 per cent and that for total milk solids at 12 per cent, these being the percentages below which milk sold for household use, and to be served in hotels, restaurants and boarding houses, may not go. This is the first law enacted in Pennsylvania in which a milk standard for the entire State has been fixed. It is worthy of note also that the standard thus set is identical with the national milk standard governing the milk trade between the States. This standard was proclaimed by the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States under authority of Congress, upon the recommendation of an expert commission who had studied the milk laws of the various cities and commonwealths of the Union, as well as the composition of milk of known purity from thousands of dairy cows of all breeds and from all parts of the country.

"The law interferes, however, with no fair trade in any wholesale milk or milk product. Skim milk, when clean and wholesome, may still be sold, if sold as such, for household use, and milk yielded by cows of low fat strains may easily be brought to standard by the use in the herd of cows producing fat, rich milk, or may be sold to the creamery as heretofore on the basis of its actual analysis."

The Commissioner further states that this law also improves the standard for cream, bringing up the requirement to 18 per cent, as in the national standard and prohibits the sale as "cream" of a mixture of cream with evaporated or condensed milk, or with any other substance having the effect of increasing the thickness or consistency. The analysis of the creams recently on sale in the State show clearly the fairness of this standard.

SOCIAL ECONOMY MISUNDERSTOOD?

Correspondent Takes up Argument Presented Regarding Socialism

To the Editor of the Charleroi Mail:

Sir: After reading Mr Bruce's article and your editorial in Friday's Mail, I have decided to trouble you with a few more lines on the subject. I do it because I believe you have written your editorial in good faith but without giving sufficient thought to what would happen if people would generally decide to follow your advice.

I will not take up the question of individual possibilities because it's so clear that while there is room at the top for people of special abilities, all the miners cannot become coal operators any more than all mill hands can become superintendents.

The matter of owning stock in mines or mills is also of doubtful advantage to the workers, but I will not take up that question. What troubles me is your advice of economy. Surely you are not anxious for a general panic. The next few months the closing of mills and mines in Charleroi is going to force people to economize. And the result will not be to the liking nor advantage of the business people of Charleroi.

Economy is all right for the few if only practiced by the few. But if adopted as a general rule it would have disastrous results. Let us give a few examples.

Suppose ten millions of people would at once decide to practice economy by cutting off one pound of sugar each week. This would mean over forty million pounds of sugar in one month. It would also mean idleness for an army of people employed in producing, transporting and handling this large quantity of sugar. Suppose one thousand readers of the Mail and one thousand readers of [illegible] practice economy to the extent of having their names taken off the subscription list. This would mean idleness for several of the employes of both papers. Suppose the people would decide to do away with the luxury of patronizing moving picture

MISAPPLIED ENERGY.

Elsewhere in a comunication Louis Goaziou takes issue with the Mail over an editorial comment on social and industrial conditions. The Mail made the statement that in this country of opportunity poverty and impecuniousness is largely a matter of volition, and that thrift, economy and self-denial from the time a young man enters the field of labor, would enable him to become a capitalist, as capital, which is essential in every business undertaking, represents unspent savings of labor, and by this means attain a competence and independence. Mr. Goaziou holds that such thrift and economy, applied generally would cut down labor, increase competition, and cause increased misery and want to prevail, and is therefor false economy. He evidently views the situation from the mistaken standpoint so common nowadays that labor is an end instead of a means; that all a workman wants is a steady job at good wages—a chance to work—instead of the higher objects of what work will attain.

Saving as a mere end in itself is penuriousness, a most degrading and demoralizing passion. But the efforts of man to produce goods are so inefficient unless he is aided by capital, which is impossible without previous savings, that he who does not save consumes the seedcorn that is the hope of next year's harvest. It is difficult to determine at what point consumption should stop and saving begin. Undoubtedly both individuals and nations have erred on either side at various times, now living in squalor to accumulate wealth, now spending their substance in riotous living until there is a famine in the land. There is not much to choose between these two vices, but this much is clear: only so much should be saved as will maintain a maximum final consumption over long periods of time. A failure to do this is what causes the fluctuation in national prosperity which results in industrial depressions with consequent idleness of workmen and human distress.

Luxury, although harmless in itself, and perfectly laudable under certain conditions is, nevertheless, excessive consumption, and is unjustifiable to many individuals and people as a whole who practice it, but cannot afford it, because it is a satisfaction of wants permitted ahead of its time, that is, working people who make good wages expend them on ephemeral pleasures and luxuries, under the mistaken idea that the more such things they consume the more labor they create. Whereas if they saved this money and secured for themselves homes and made provision to educate their children and accumulate a competence for old age to prevent themselves from becoming a charge upon the productiveness of their children, they would be performing an infinitely greater service to the welfare of society. Excessive consumption may boom conditions for awhile, but the reaction inevitably comes when productiveness decreases and is checked because of the lack of capital—savings—to continue it.

Along with excessive consumption there is also an enormous harmful consumption that is sapping the vitality of the nation. Among these may be mentioned the consumption of alcoholic liquors. It cannot be claimed that a cessation of this consumption would cause idleness of labor, because the grain consumed in the manufacture of alcoholic beverages would not make breakfast food a month for the army of unemployed that always exists in this country. In addition immense sums are annually squandered by the working people as well as the wealthy on passing caprices which do not correspond to any really felt want. It is this excessive consumption that is causing the industrial and commercial depression through which the country is now passing.

It may help workmen temporarily in some lines of industry to produce goods for capricious and needless consumption but the only way to help society at large is to give workmen useful employment, to aid and encourage them to produce needful goods. Every employment of labor which encourages the production of luxuries is a misdirection of social energy, an encouragement to society to spend its money for "that which is not bread, and its labor for that which satisfieth not." Excessive consumption is necessarily wasteful consumption, and as such is necessarily reprehensible. There can be no kind of doubt as to the working of this principle along established and accepted lines of social economy, as well as the teachings of Christianity on this subject.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

"I look for the Lutherans to win the Church League pennant," said a local baseball fan who is deeply interested in the games of the league, "unless some of the other teams take a brace and adopt the tactics of the Lutherans and follow the plan to the end. This is team discipline, which the Lutherans are maintaining as no other team is doing in the league. Coach Joe Mason has his players under a fine state of discipline, and they obey him implicity from the start to the finish of the game. They all have confidence in him, and each player knows that Joe knows the game, and whatever he tells a player to do, that player bends every energy to execute the order. In this manner the Lutherans play by system and direction, and this enables them to win from infinitely stronger teams.

"There are several teams in the league that are much stronger individually than the Lutherans, and this strength is their weakness. These teams of strong players are disinclined to obey orders, and as an experienced player usually imagines that he knows the game as well as any one else, he usually plays according to his own judgment. With a variety of conflicting opinions on the team during a game there is no head or system, and the stronger team often goes down to defeat to the weaker one that has a general and obeys orders without question."

"I am pleased to note," observed another fan, "that there is a disposition on the college teams to do away with the senseless chatter in the game that is called 'ginger'. For some unknown reason a player is supposed to be full of ginger that can vocifciferate the greatest number of times 'Good eye, old man, good eye,' or 'make him hit,' or some other ridiculous and vapid expression which is really a reflection on a player's intelligence, when one comes to consider the parrot-like vocabulary, that is never varied. What would a workman think of a superintendent in the Pittsburg Steel works, for example, who would walk up and down through the works shouting, 'Bully boy, Tom,' 'good eye, Mike,' or some other senseless thing? Would that inspire or stimulate better effort? The Boston American League team, I notice, is cutting out the senseless chatter which sounds like a bunch of women at a quilting bee, and confining their talking to the coaches.

"Another thing the college teams are doing that is improving the game is cutting out the dirty playing, such as the catcher and pitcher interfering with the player, and basemen trying to block runners unfairly, and a hundred other tricks that are worked in every game. With the colleges setting the standard of honor, a new interest will be manifested in the game."

many and is preached by many. But it's a false doctrine if generally applied. When the corporations begin to practice it the industrial horizon begins to look very dark. If you could persuade the thousands of workers who, out of their scanty wages arrange to put a few dollars monthly in some old bag to spend that money for clothes, shoes, furniture, etc., you would at once open up a few industries to give employment to workers to produce the extra clothes, shoes etc. called for. If we would or could buy more clothes, more furniture, more books, etc., there would be none of the so called overproduction that causes panics.

Do not preach a reduction of the standard of living through false economy. A dollar spent is a dollar giving employment to some one. A dollar put in a trunk has no value to the community.. The man who denies himself and saves his earnings has some advantages over others for the simple reason that others did not or could not, and he was able to use his savings to exploit those who had none. To what advantage could he have used the savings if everybody had done like himself?

If everybody would deny themselves and save their earnings we would soon be reduced to the level of the rat eating Chinese, and I know that the editor of the Mail would be the last man to desire such results. Let us raise our moral, intellectual and physical standards instead of trying to lower either through enforced or voluntary denials of the necessaries of life.

PAINTED HIS PORTRAIT.

His Wife Was the Artist, and the Result Wasn't Flattering.

A suburbanite but lately married went out to post a letter, and as the lamps had not been lit in the road in which he dwelt he could only dimly see his way. A short distance up the road he met, as he thought, his wife, who had been out to tea, and as he went past he just whispered:

"All right, my dear; I shall be with you in a minute."

Immediately after he had said these words he saw the lady turn a startled look upon him and then hurry away, and the horrible idea occurred to him that it was not his wife at all and that in the darkness he had made a mistake. He decided to say nothing about the matter and quickly disappeared.

When he returned home he found his wife waiting for him, and she at once greeted him with the words:

"Oh, George, I have had such a frightful experience! I was just coming down the road when a man tried to stop me and said, 'All right, dear; I shall be with you in a minute.' I ran home, found you out, and I've been so much alarmed."

George was just about to explode when an idea came to him.

"What sort of man was it?" he asked.

"Oh," replied the young wife, "I saw him quite plainly, and a more villainous face I never beheld in my life. He was a perfect monster, with crime stamped upon every feature."

George decided it was best to say nothing after all.—London Tit-Bits.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

A Terrifying Hat.

When the French artist Benjamin Constant was traveling in Morocco he was invited by the sultan to present himself at court at Fez. The painter's first thought was in regard to his costume. "Court" in Europe was one thing; in Morocco it was likely to prove something different. There was nothing to do, however, but to wear his ordinary evening clothes. He was ignorant of the fact that the Moors look upon black garments as very vulgar, and it was only after his arrival that he learned his mistake. The courtiers smiled openly; worst of all, they sneered. The painter was a man of hasty temper, and suddenly, nettled by their insolence, he closed his opera hat and sprang it open in the faces of the jeering crowd. They scattered, yelling with surprise and fear. The sultan heard the noise and demanded the cause. After he had seen and examined the wonderful hat he gave this oracular opinion:

"If I had lived a hundred years in your country and adopted all your other customs I could never have brought myself to set on my head so hideous a contrivance as that!"

Painfully Explicit.

The proprietor of a certain hotel in Europe has posted up the following warning to his clients:

"Gentlemen who come in this hotel not say anything about their meals they will be charged for, and if they should say beforehand that they are going out to breakfast or dinner, and if they say that they not have anything to eat they will be charged, or unless they bring it to the notice of the manager, and should they want not to say anything, they must order the manager for, and not any one else, and unless they not bring it to the notice of the manager, they will be charged for the least things not, according to hotel rate. And no fuss will be allowed afterward about it, and nothing will be allowed to deduct anything out of it."

After this explicit information there surely could be no excuse for misunderstanding.—Boston Globe.

Surprising the Bullock.

In times of crisis and worry a kind word has been known to have surprisingly good results. The unexpectedness of such a word is perhaps the secret of its force. A late book, "On the Wool Track," backs the moral with an anecdote.

A team was working on the Broken Hill road, and a bullock—the Beelzebub of the team—had gone obstinate, and the coach was passing. The whip was swinging, and some apt remarks were just forming on the back of the teamster's tongue when he caught sight of a clerical hat on the front seat and just in time thought better of it. He coughed politely.

"Ahem—Strawberry," he said, "proceed!"

To his obvious astonishment Strawberry proceeded.

The Indian's Vision.

More or less wonderful accounts have from time to time been given of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During a British anthropological expedition to the Torres strait the visual faculty of the natives was carefully tested, and from these tests the conclusion was reached that the excellence of vision shown by the savages has a psychological origin—that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the civilized man acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can. Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.—Scientific American.

Wondrous Tact.

As an example of graciousness and tact Matthew White tells in Munsey's Magazine of a London clergyman who was called on to address an audience of actors. Alluding to the better social status of the players, the clergyman said that in former days it was sometimes customary to brand them as vagabonds and bore a hole in their ears with an awl, that the citizens might thus be forewarned. "And who knows," the clergyman added, "but that it is a survival of an endeavor to hide this mark of indignity that causes some of the actors even today to wear their hair long?"

Bottles and Rags.

"Bottles and rags, bottles and rags!" called out a rag and bone man as he plied his calling.

"Why do you always put these words together?" asked a passerby.

"Because, madam," replied the man, courteously touching his hat, "wherever you find bottles you find rags!"—London Family Herald.

A Shellfish Thought.

"Funny, isn't it"—

"That what?"

"That when a fellow's affairs have reached the blue point he never declares that the world is his oyster!"—Judge.

The Ruthless Razor.

Lady Customer (in furniture shop)—What has become of those lovely sideboards you had when I was last here? Salesman (smirking)—I shaved 'em off, madam.

Sympathy.

Cora—Have you seen my new photographs, dear? Every one says they look exactly like me. Dora—What a shame! Can't you get another sitting?

Chiefly the mold of a man's fortune is in his own hands.—Bacon.

BASEBALL SIGNS.

Their Importance Is Much Greater Than Their Number.

Among the players we do not use the word "signal." With us it is a "sign." There are not as many "signs" used on a ball club as the public would believe. Of course the catcher must "sign" the pitcher for every ball that he throws. That is to prevent confusion or, as we say, to keep from "crossing each other." The catcher has a sign for a curve ball, a fast ball and a slow one.

To ball players all curve balls, such as the drop and the outcurve, are called "a curve." The catcher gives the same sign for any one of them. We do not call a ball that jumps "in" a curve. Ball players do not recognize the incurve. That is called a fast ball. Any ball thrown by a right handed pitcher with sufficient speed will jump inward to a slight degree. The outcurve and drop are unnatural curves, and the ball must be spun in an unnatural manner to get that peculiar "break."

The only other "sign" of importance is the one the batter gives to the runner when he intends to hit the ball. If he wants the runner to start as he swings (the hit and run play) he gives him a certain sign. There are any number of signs used for this play. Sometimes the batter gives it by rubbing his hand over the small end of the bat. Again, he may give it by knocking the dust from his shoes with the big end of the bat.—John J. McGraw in Metropolitan Magazine.

EAST INDIAN RUNNERS.

Kahars Who Can Regularly Make a Hundred Miles a Day.

Ordinary Marathon races seem rather insignificant compared with the regular performances of a certain east Indian caste. These Kahars, also known as Jhinwarb, live in the Punjab, where for centuries they have acted as runners, fishermen and water fowl catchers.

The men are trained runners and are said to be able to go a hundred miles a day without resting. According to Baily's Magazine, there is a well authenticated instance that Tika Ram, the son of Lalu Ram, carried dispatches 300 miles in three days—from Mean-Mir to Meerut.

The point discussed, however, is whether the normal exertions of the Kahar post runners and the similar exertions of jinrikisha men shortened their lives, and it appears that the Kahars, trained from childhood to be distance runners, live to be old men. They are not only able to withstand the strain of running great distances under a heavy load, but thrive under it.

The jinrikisha man, too, notwithstanding his irregular diet, excessive use of liquor and exposure to the elements, lives to a reasonable age. In Tokyo when a census was taken of the jinrikisha men a few years ago there were found to be more than 1,300 who were over fifty-five years of age.

Sailing Is So Interesting.

The lady was reading a nautical novel. She struggled along bravely for a few minutes, but finally had to appeal to her husband.

"Gerald," she said, "the author says that the boat was sailing 'wing and wing.' What does that mean? I've been on a yacht, but I never heard that before."

"That means," answered Gerald, rejoicing in the fact that he, too, had spent several hours on a sailing vessel—"that means that the schooner had her mains'l out to port and her fores'l out to starboard, or vice versa."

"Oh, I see!" cried the lady. "It's just like a chicken—a wing on each side. And now I understand why they call those little sails in the middle 'jibs.' It's short for 'giblets,' of course. Isn't sailing interesting?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ancient Architecture.

Herr Knauth, the architect in charge of the Cathedral of Strassburg, has shown that the principles of construction followed by the great cathedral builders of former times are identical with those used by the builders of the Egyptian pyramids and are based on triangulation. The same simple geometrical figure underlies all these constructions. More than this, Herr Knauth traces the architectural principle in the formation of crystals and lays down this formula: "The laws of proportion in mediaeval architecture are the geometrical laws of crystallization."

Cause of the Delay.

"Why is your friend staying so long in New York?"

"I don't know—haven't heard which of the two reasons is keeping him."

"Which of the two?"

"Yes, whether he is having too good a time to come away or has spent all his money and can't get away."—Buffalo Express.

Chronic.

"One thing about Jinx, he never comes into one's office without knocking."

"Another thing about Jinx is that he never goes anywhere without knocking."—Houston Post.

Self.

A perfect understanding of self is a perfect understanding of all things, for man is the condensed whole. From such a man no power is withheld. All things are obedient to him.—Freedom.

Life, upon the whole, is far more pleasurable than painful; otherwise we would not feel pain so impatiently when it comes.—Leigh Hunt.

First Flying Ambulances.

A valued servant and friend of the great Napoleon, Dominique Larrey, first established that system of "flying ambulances," which carried the wounded to the rear almost as soon as disabled. The staff numbered about 340 men with four heavy and twelve light two and four wheeled ambulances to each division. Napoleon reviewed this arm of the service with the greatest interest and once exclaimed to Larrey: "Your work is one of the most important conceptions of our age. It will suffice for your reputation." For the Egyptian campaign Larrey secured the services of 800 qualified surgeons in addition to the regular force. At Alexandria General Figulères was severely wounded, and on his recovery wished to present Napoleon with a splendid Damascus saber. "Yes," said the emperor, "I accept in order to give it the surgeon in chief, by whose exertions your life has been spared." This saber, engraved with the words "Aboukir" and "Larrey," was taken from the great surgeon by the Prussians at Waterloo.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

The Horrors of Thirst.

In the oasis of Mogara, says L. Dow Covington in the Wide World Magazine, we had a first experience of the desert traveler's great enemy—thirst. We were seated in front of a Bedouin chief's tent, our two baby camels enjoying their first drink of water since they had left Cairo, when, from across a sand dune, a Bedouin came staggering and tottering toward us. His eyes were bloodshot, his lips twice their natural size, while his tongue, blue and dry, hung out of his mouth. Evidently he had lost himself, had wandered around for days in search of water and had stumbled upon the oasis in the very nick of time. To allow him to drink would have been his death. In spite of his frantic struggles, he was held by four men, while a fifth allowed a few drops of water to trickle down his throat. It was as though he were a redhot boiler which would have to be allowed to cool off before being filled if an accident was to be avoided.

Objected to Publicity.

Old Brother Brown had been approached several times by the colored deacons of his church and asked to pay his church dues. He had promised to "pay up" just as soon as he sold a calf which he owned. Several months later he sold the calf. The next Sunday morning at service the congregation sang the old familiar hymn:

The half has never been told
Of life so full and free.

Brother Brown, somewhat deaf and conscious of his failure to pay his dues, understood the words to be:

The calf has never been sold,
But when it's sold he'll pay.

When the hymn was finished the old colored man, very indignant, arose and said:

"Bredren and sistahs, I has sold dat ca'f and heh's yo' ten dollahs! But I didn't ca' about de whole chu'ch singin' about it."—National Monthly.

A Costly Tuft of Feathers.

On the apex of the crown worn by the Prince of Wales on special occasions is a curious feather, or, rather, tuft of feathers, the top of which is adorned with a gold thread. The value of this feather is estimated at $50,000, and it has the distinction of being the only one of its kind in human possession. Twenty years passed after the first hunter set out to procure the feather before it was attained, and during that period more than a dozen hunters had lost their lives in the quest. The costly tuft is of periwak feathers, and the extraordinary danger incurred in procuring it was due to the fact that the periwak, for some unknown reason, is to be found only in dense jungles in which tigers make their lair.—Chicago Tribune.

Turning the Turtle.

Turtle hunting is not without excitement. The method of capture consists of the simple act of turning the turtle on its back. Once in this position it is quite helpless. Its only defense is to cover its captor with sand thrown up by the powerful front legs or flippers. These are brought into action in an instant, and woe betide the captor who has his eyes and mouth open at the moment, for the sand is hurled with great force. When turned over the captive is dragged up the beach to above high water mark, and this is no easy task, for it weighs about four hundredweight.

Premeditated.

"And why do you claim that it was with malice aforethought that the automobile defendant ran down the complainant?"

"On the morning it happened, your honor, I heard him say that he was going to take out his new auto and see if he could not run across a few people he knew."—Houston Post.

A Giddy Girl.

"Is your daughter of a practical turn of mind?"

"No; she is very frivolous. Wants to take cooking lessons instead of perfecting her game of bridge."—Exchange.

His Honest Face.

"Anyway, he has an honest face."

"Honest? You surprise me."

"Yes; it's the only honest thing about him. It shows how dishonest he really is."—Life.

Not Misplaced.

The Mandarin's Robe.

The author of "Recollections of a Society Clairvoyant" tells of the case of a lady who was haunted by reason of a garment she wore It was a mandarin's robe from China stated to be part of the loot from the sack of Peking. The owner, who lived in a flat in a London suburb, first began to be alarmed by "a smell of ... position in her bedroom" and heard "stealthy footsteps padding along the tiny passage in and out of the sitting room." She changed her house but the obsession continued The dreadful smell recurred, her cats died in great agony from some unknown cause, and uncanny footsteps were heard at night. According to the clairvoyant's diagnosis, the robe had belonged to "a man who had worn it when he engaged in the mystic forms of ceremonial magic known to the Chinese He had met with a violent death, and certain malignant forces were still imprisoned in his robe, which, from the bloodstains on it, he must have been wearing when he was killed" The curse was eventually dispelled by the robe being burned.

Ruskin and the Champion Bore.

One of the principal clubs in Pall Mall has the misfortune to be frequented by a gentleman who is by common consent the greatest bore and buttonholer in London Some years ago this good man on his return from his autumn holiday, was telling all his acquaintances at the club that he had been occupying a house at the lakes not far from Mr Ruskin, who, he added, was in a very melancholy state

"I am truly sorry for that," said one of his hearers. "What is the matter with him?"

"Well," replied the buttonholer, "I was walking one day in the lane which separated Ruskin's house from mine, and I saw him coming down the lane toward me. The moment he caught sight of me he darted into a wood which was close by and hid behind a tree till I had passed Oh, very sad indeed"—From "Collections and Recollections."

Fault of the Fork.

"Won't you have a fork?"

"No, thanks. I never use forks. They leak so bad they ain't no use."

Tony Parenti, an Italian, died Sunday night at the Memorial Hospital, Monongahela, from injuries received in a hand to hand encounter with a negro Sunday afternoon at Parenti's home up Pigeon Creek valley.

Vandergrift Independents Win Through Dropped Fly

MAC PITCHES GOOD BALL

A dropped fly ball in the ninth inning lost the game to Charleroi Independents, playing at Vandergrift Saturday. Charleroi was in the lead three times and apparently had the game sewed up when the tragedy of the ninth happened.

Vandergrift's infield by fast fielding saved the game several times. John (Scissors) McIlvaine pitched winning ball all the time, especially with men on bases. Cydes Charle... stole home in the third. Cratty's hit over the left field fence was the longest hit ever made on the grounds. A party of automobilists from Charleroi drove over for the game. Charleroi's team plays Irwin Saturday, June 17, at Charleroi Score.

LAST WEEK OF THE QUAKER SHOW

Many features each night.—Wednesday night views from the life of Christ—actual photographs taken at Oberammergau during the action of the Passion Play.—Saturday night thelittle Girls have a nail driving contest for $2.00 cash. Funny contests for the Boys every night commencing with tonight's show for cash prizes.

The Quaker ... last week in Charleroi and as the past three weeks have seen great crowds gathered on the lot each night, the Quaker says he expects the interest to continue, as he has some of his best features for this the final week and they will be put on nightly. One of the interesting features of the shows has been the illustrated songs in which they use the calcium or lime light, and on Wednesday night they are going to use this light in showing the views of the life of Christ and actual pictures of the Passion Play posed for and by those who depicted this famous play at Oberammergau The Quaker says they are the only original set that has been shown here and the coloring and finish is absolutely perfect.

Beginning tonight there will be contests by the boys each night for cash prizes and on next Saturday night the little girls will have their innings when they drive nails for a cash prize of $2.00 Added interest in the performances will also be shown by some new faces among the people that give the vaudeville part of the entertainment this week

There was considerable excitement at the Saturday night show and the cheering of the various Charleroi ... could be heard all over the down town district But the climax was reached when the Quaker removed a large tape worm that had been brought to the Quaker Doctor at his office late in the afternoon, from a jar and showed its enormous length by stretching it up in the air and across the stage.

Almost any time during the day people can be seen going to the Quaker Doctor's office carrying cups, cans, etc., that contain these parasites which his herbs have removed. He says many of the people carry around these monsters and take dopes and doses of all kinds trying to cure imaginary ills when one of the life-sapping parasites is the cause of all the trouble.

With regard to the crowds that now come all day to see him for examination and advice, he says that many are beyond the reach of medical interference and can only be given advice with regard to diet, etc., to prolong their few remaining years and alleviate their suffering; many however on the other hand, that call with little or no hope are sent away with the assurance that they can be cured and are told just what to do to reach and get back the greatest boon given to man—good health.
